

Love

Sreeparvathy R

Former Faculty Member

Dept. of English, Sree Ayyappa College

Eramallikkara, Kerala

When light hid in its cave to sleep
We met at the seashore every day.

Love is deep turbulent sea
And she, my sea nymph.

Oh! mesmerizing waves,
Please roar one more time
To wake my beloved
For an eternal reunion.

Can I forget mountains, valleys?
meadows, hairpin turns and silky banks
of heavenly pleasure?

Can I abandon our Garden of Eden,
Where my ego burns into ashes?

Here she comes, from the western brine

As a new moon blooms at sky.
Celestial thirst and earthly passion
Collide in us.

Love, like the live coal
Hides thousand fire tongues
And put on the grey dust all over it.
But each gentle touch of crazy wind,
Will kindle the flame till the end.
We need nights for new mornings
We need dreams for new future.

When I'm with her, I love nights
more than I loved before.
When I'm away, I miss nights
more than I missed before.
Come my love, let's be one...
For exploring new littorals of love
may I light the sea sleeps in you?