

An Ode to Darkness

It was one of those nights when I couldn't sleep

Pins drop silence and not even a peep

Restlessness in bed, I was staring the ceiling

And all around me it was darkness in heap

The loneliness desired for a placate company

To share the solitude and cut half the agony

Suddenly I felt a soothing cuddle

With glooms and shades, and nothing sunny

Darkness was hugging me from all around

Whispering a lullaby without a sound

I am your ally, your friend, he said

Though relaxed a bit, I was spell bound

Can darkness even be considered a friend?
It's the point in history where hopes end
Fascinated with mighty sun and twinkling stars
Words of darkness we never comprehend

It sacrifices its life for light to happen
Yet in our lives, remains forbidden
I love your all shades, O darkness
You bore the fruit when my earth was barren

Laying myself in your arms, I quietly sleep
You stay in a corner and silently weep
Saying you good bye with the crispy dawn
I think about you, A "thought" too deep
