

Confined to Oblivion

AKANKSHA LAKRA
Lecturer in English
S.D.WOMEN'S COLLEGE
ODISHA, INDIA

The nights were restless
Amidst thoughts of a world;
Where they existed together
And breathed in love forever!

He was her star
So distant and yet so far!
She watched him but he was beyond her reach;
With billions around her creating a breach

Heavy with a sigh,
Tired soul of his, drenched in mire, could not see that bright sky.

He pleaded her for some time
He dined with a glass of wine;
And left his promises behind!

She blushed when her phone chimed
She endeavored to keep everything fine;
She stopped to let him remind
That she was there for him all the time!

She wandered around clouds of doubt,
Thinking if his reasons were strong;
Or her emotions were wrong!

Faith, all she did need
Endurance and care could she only feed
Embracing the dearth that stayed along her,
She ended the beliefs which she did incur;
Shutting the doors of those blurred hopes;
She lost herself in his isle of promises
Departing forever in a world of sacrifices