

You & I

Shivender Rahul

A delightful poetry in motion,
Of you such is my notion.

Enveloped in dreamy mystery,
You walked the aisle of my life.

We sat side by side, shoulder to shoulder,
My words embraced your words all this while.

As the golden rays of sun melted in horizon's arms,
I looked in your eyes and bid you goodbye.

Brief was to be our parting,
All roads are to lead me to you.
The words we exchanged filled the gulfs between us,
The pouring of our hearts glued us together.

I had always known your face,
Like it was engraved in every landscape,
In the nooks and corners of your face,
I had seen flashes of history untold.

In the palaces of Gothic Architecture
My lips blazed with your burning kisses
In those moments I kissed your soul
I had then been yours....you... mine.

We are not lovers...not meant to be together,
Soul-mates, we must be floating forever.
